

PAIGE GERBIC, M.D., CRITICAL CARE MEDICINE

M.D.: Oregon Health & Science University, Portland, Ore.

Internship: Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center, Lebanon, N.H.

Presentations:

Seizures in the Perioperative Period. Gerbic P. OHSU Department of Anesthesiology Grand Rounds, April 2008.

Hobbies/Interests: Spending time with family and camping, hiking, eating out

During medical school and especially internship I discovered that I had a strong interest in critical care. After finding out about the 48-month Oregon Scholars Program at OHSU I jumped at the chance to be involved. It is a perfect mix of the two specialties that I feel complements each other in skill sets as well as caring for patients throughout the perioperative period. I feel this is a unique and appealing program in that the critical care months are integrated throughout the curriculum allowing for a mix of exposure to both without concern for "losing skills" or "becoming rusty" in one specialty over the other.