THE SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

The OHSU School of Medicine is the direct descendent of the University of Oregon School of Medicine that first opened its doors in Portland in 1887 and graduated its first class the following year. Only one other medical school in the West has a longer lineage; only 33 of the present 130 medical schools in the United States existed prior to the founding of the School of Medicine in Oregon. Today the School is widely recognized for excellence and its mission continues to be the enhancement of human health through programs in education, research, health care delivery and public service. It is where healing, teaching and discovery come together in Oregon.

The school's faculty are dedicated to preparing physicians for the medical, ethical and humanistic responsibilities of their calling, while also providing outstanding care to patients from Oregon and elsewhere. Along with the art of teaching and healing comes the responsibility for discovery. School of Medicine faculty are widely recognized nationally and internationally for their pursuit of new knowledge in a breadth of investigative areas ranging from molecular biology and cancer to heart disease, behavioral science and issues of public health. In addition to maintaining a high standard of basic and clinical research, the faculty also guide the graduate studies programs that educate the next generation of biomedical scientists.

The challenges for physicians and scientists in this century grow by the year as opportunities increase for new knowledge, for better disease treatment, and for a health care system that provides for the needs of the individual in a manner that is affordable and available to all. OHSU and its School of Medicine are committed to meeting the health professions and science education, biomedical research and health care needs of the people and the state it has been proud to serve for more than 100 years.

ACADEMIC HOODING

The academic hood has its origins in the Middle Ages as a part of ecclesiastic rather than civilian dress. Begging friars wore the hood, or tippet, over the shoulders and also used it as a head covering in inclement weather. In the late 1800's the hoods with identifiable regalia became part of academic dress in conjunction with the cap and gown. The American Intercollegiate Commission standardized academic regalia in 1895, and those standards remain essentially unchanged to the present.

The hood is made of the same material as the gown. The inner lining of the hood represents the colors of the university that confers the degree. OHSU colors are light blue, dark green and white. The colored inside border indicates the academic discipline—green-trimmed with a green tassel for physician assistant studies, pink for public health, golden yellow for science, green for medicine and dark blue for philosophy.

The hood is awarded by the faculty of the school upon completion of the required course of study. Members of the faculty are selected each year by the graduates for the honor of awarding this insignia of academic achievement. These hoods can be displayed by their recipients at academic ceremonies throughout their lifetimes.

Faculty Excellence Awards in Medical Education

The John S. Miller Award

This award is presented to an intern with the qualities of an outstanding teacher. The award was established by the Class of 1974 in memory of classmate John Miller, M.D.

Beech Burns, M.D.

Resident, Department of Pediatrics

Jessi Khangura, M.D.

Resident, Department of Internal Medicine

The Howard P. Lewis Award

This award is presented to a senior resident for outstanding teaching. The late Dr. Lewis was the distinguished chairman of the Department of Medicine from 1947 to 1971.

Jason Lattin, M.D.

Resident, Department of Surgery

The David W. E. Baird Award

This award recognizes excellence in a junior faculty member and was named after Dr. Baird, Dean of the School of Medicine from 1943 to 1968.

Dawn Dillman, M.D.

Department of Anesthesiology and Peri-Operative Medicine

The J. David Bristow Award

The Bristow award was established by the class of 1977 to recognize a faculty member who exemplifies the ideals of the true physician as he or she conducts clinical practice with patients and colleagues. The late Dr. Bristow chaired the Department of Medicine from 1971 to 1977.

Sima Desai, M.D.

Department of Medicine
Division of Hospital Medicine

The Allan J. Hill, Jr. Awards

These awards recognize excellence in teaching by honoring two full-time faculty members, one in basic science and one in clinical science. The Allan J. Hill Award is named for a former chairman of the Department of Pediatrics, who died in 1964.

Gary Ciment, Ph.D.

Department of Cell & Developmental Biology

Marc Gosselin, M.D.

Department of Diagnostic Radiology

Faculty Mentor Award

This award is made by the Dean and recognizes a faculty member, who demonstrates outstanding skill and dedication to advising and mentoring medical students.

Greg Magarian, M.D.

Department of Internal Medicine

The Community Preceptor Award

This award is made by the Dean and recognizes a physician or physician group that has demonstrated outstanding dedication to the education of medical students in the community setting.

The Edward S. Hayes Gold-Headed Cane Award of the OHSU School of Medicine, with the trust it symbolizes, is presented annually to a member of the graduating medical class who has been selected for this high honor by a vote of his or her peers and teachers. The award is given to a student in recognition of compassionate devotion and effective service to the sick, with the conviction that its holder will forever epitomize and uphold the traditions of the true physician.

The gold-headed cane represents the spirit of service which is based upon the precepts of the Oath of Hippocrates, Prayer of Maimonides, and the Golden Rule. In addition to the cane and a commemorative plaque, a monetary gift is awarded to support the furtherance of the recipient's postgraduate education.

A tradition at a number of American medical schools today, this award originated with the late Dr. William J. Kerr of the University of California School of Medicine. He noted that there were many awards for scholarship or other similar accomplishments, but none for the qualities of mind, heart and hand that are so much a part of the true physician.

A gold-headed cane was selected to symbolize the award because it is rich in historical significance.

The physician of the late seventeenth century, of whom Dr. John Radcliffe is an example, was distinguished by his silk coat, breeches and stockings, buckled shoes, lace ruffles, full-bottomed wig and his gold-headed cane. Symbolic of the wand of Aesculapius, the physician's cane was usually of considerable length and was provided with a knob or bar containing a vinaigrette that was held to the nose to ward off noxious vapors arising from the sick room.

But Radcliffe's cane was somewhat different. It was of the variety known as Malacca, with long metal ferrule and gold handle, measuring in all only three feet, three inches in length. Its ends were indented and not removable and its shape suggested that it was used for support.

Radcliffe's cane became known as the gold-headed cane. It was passed on to five distinguished British physicians in succession and now rests in the Hall of the Royal College of Physicians, London. It carries the coat of arms of Radcliffe and those of Pitcairn, Baillie, Mead and Askew, all of whom carried the cane in their daily activities.

These physicians were famed for and had no peers in the care of their patients. Their clinical acumen had to be developed to a high degree because in their day there was little of the sound scientific knowledge of medicine that is available in such quantity today.

Because of his interest in promoting and preserving the high stature of medical practice and the care of patients in future physicians, the late Edmund Hayes of Portland made a gift for this purpose in 1966 to the Medical Research Foundation of Oregon in memory of his father, Dr. Edward S. Hayes, who for many years was a dedicated and respected practitioner of medicine in Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

It was decided by the Board of Trustees of the Foundation and the executive faculty of the School of Medicine, that because of uniquely related historical significance, the Gold-Headed Cane Award would recognize and support the vitally important ideals expressed by Dr. Hayes.

The cane, while not an exact replica of Radcliffe's cane, is similar and traditional in its form and is permanently displayed in the History of Medicine Room at the Oregon Health & Science University, with a statement of the award's history and intent. The engraved head is solid gold. Here appear the words, "The Edward S. Hayes Award" and the rod of Aesculapius. The emblem of the School of Medicine is engraved on the end. The ferrule is designed with branches of laurel, symbolizing honor and fame, and with four illustrations of important episodes in the history of medicine in Oregon. The first two illustrations honor the individuals who pioneered and populated this country and who came by land and by sea. They were closely followed by physicians, often circuit riders, who made their rounds astride a horse. The open book with the date 1867 signifies the beginning of medical education in Oregon.

The Oath of Geneva

At the time of being admitted as a member of the medical profession:

I solemnly pledge myself to consecrate my life to the service of humanity;

I will give to my teachers the respect and gratitude which is their due;

I will practice my profession with conscience and dignity;

The health of my patient will be my
first consideration;

I will respect the secrets which are
confided in me;

I will maintain by all means in my power,
the honor and the noble traditions of the medical profession; my colleagues will be my brothers and sisters.

I will not permit considerations of religion,
nationality, race, party politics or social standing to intervene between my duty and my patient;

I will maintain the utmost respect for human life,
even under threat;

I will not use my medical knowledge contrary to the laws of humanity.

I make these promises solemnly, freely and upon my honor.
