Courses Taught (1992-2007 only)

2007, 08	NURS 587	Role Transition Seminar This doctoral level role course is developed in concert with the students and is designed to enable taking on and managing the role of a nurse scientist in academic, clinical, and policy arenas.
2003, 04, 05	NMETH 580	Methodological Perspectives in Nursing Inquiry This was a doctoral level survey course in nursing research with an emphasis on the methodologies and methods of critical post modern, empirical, and interpretive approaches to nursing science. Students developed research proposals as a course requirement.
2001	NMETH520	Nursing Research Methods This master's level research course emphasized research critique and research application
1998, 99, 00	NMETH 582&3	Interpretive Methods in Nursing Research I developed this two sequence doctoral level course. This was a combination survey course and hands-on experience. Over the course of two quarters each student developed and conducted an individual interpretive research study. For most this became the pilot for their dissertation. I taught an abbreviated version of this course in Chiang Mai, Thailand, in August 1999.
1997, 98, 99, 00, 01	NMETH403	Nursing Research Methods This undergraduate research course introduced students to critiquing the evidence for practice.
1997	NURS201	Human Development This undergraduate (pre-nursing) course focused on development across the lifespan
1996	PCN532	Selected Topics in Family and Child Nursing This graduate level selected topics course was a seminar for students enrolled in a Family and Child Nursing master's pathway. It focuses on professional, political, and economic issues, which impact the practice of advanced nursing.
1994, 95, 96	N581	Theory Building in Nursing II This core doctoral course focused on the development and application of theories in nursing.
1994, 95, 96	PCN 512	Clinical Practicum in Parent &amp; Child Nursing

This course involved placing master's students with clinical preceptors who facilitated clinical learning of advanced practice roles. Also involved was the conduct of clinical seminars and evaluation of students learning experiences.

1993, 94, 95, 96	N305	Threats to Health New course in revised curriculum. I developed and taught this course focused on personal and environmental threats to health.
1992	PCN 531	Nursing Process in Parent and Child Nursing. This master's level core course focused on the nursing process: How nurses gather data, assess patterns, name cluster cues (diagnose), choose intervention strategies, and evaluate outcomes. The clinical component of the course included a concentrated experience in gaining reliability in NCAST
Fall, 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995	N450	Connected Learning Weekly one hour seminars with 10 to 15 undergraduate students, the purpose of which was to assist students with making connections between courses taken that quarter and their emerging views of self as nurse.
Fall, 1992(c), 1993(c), 1994, 1995 ( co-taught )	N301	The Nature of Human Health and Caring I developed this new course in a revised curriculum. It focused on the meaning of health, strategies to promote and sustain health, the role of nursing in sustaining health.
