

T.I.E.

The mission of the Teaching Interprofessional Ethics (TIE) team is to educate the next generation of OHSU health care professionals in bioethics with the goal of improving patient care and health outcomes.

Committee Members:

Phyllis Beemsterboer, EdD (Chair)
Patrick Dunn, MD (Co-Chair)
Catherine Salveson, PhD, RN
Dan Hartung, PharmD, MPH
Judith Baggs, PhD, RN
Mary Denise Smith, RN, MS, CNS
Mike Garland, DScRel
Molly Osborne, MD, PhD
Robert Potter, MD, PhD
Sam Connell, PhD
Susan Tolle, MD
Ted Ruback, MS, PA-C
Terri Schmidt, MD, MS

SAVE THE DATE!

Upcoming Speaker Series Event

October 1-2, 2009

Mark Siegler M.D.

Professor, General Internal Medicine
Director, MacLean Center for Clinical Medical Ethics
The University of Chicago

For more information about these events, please contact the OHSU Center for Ethics in Health Care

Phone: 503-494-4466
Fax: 503-494-1260
E-mail: ethics@ohsu.edu
www.ohsu.edu/ethics

The Madeline Brill Nelson Speaker Series in Ethics Education

Madeline Brill Nelson with Dr. Patrick Dunn,
OHSU Director of Ethics Education

SPEAKER SERIES

Thursday, May 7, 2009
8:00AM and Noon

MADELINE BRILL NELSON
ENDOWS ETHICS EDUCATION

Roz Babener, Madeline Brill Nelson, and Roscoe Nelson III

Madeline Brill Nelson's passion to make the world a better place is legendary, as are her dedication and generosity to this purpose. Modestly, without fanfare, she has dedicated herself to countless causes within the community. And, propelled by her rare gift for seeing and understanding need, Madeline was the very first donor to step forward to support the Center for Ethics in Health Care at OHSU when it was still but a dream in the eyes of its founders. So wholeheartedly did she grasp its potential and believe in its mission that she fell easily into the role of quiet pioneer – a role, it turns out, that comes quite naturally to her, inspired by the legacy of her father, Dr. Isidor C. Brill.

“It's impossible to express adequately what Madeline has given to the Center over these many years,” says Susan Tolle. “She sets the highest standard imaginable for integrity and commitment. And it is with such gratitude and appreciation that we honor her and her father's legacy through the work that we do – so much of which is possible only because of her dedication to the Center.”

When asked once to describe her father, Madeline offered the following words. “Dedicated. Always trying to heal. Quiet. Happy to help and serve. Visionary.” As it happens, such phrases also perfectly describe Madeline herself. But, modest as she is, she would be the last to realize it.

PROGRAM

“National Health Care Reform: An Ethical, Cultural, and Business Imperative”

8:00-9:00 AM, School of Nursing, Room 144

“Origins of a Racial Divide: The AMA Apology to African American Physicians”

Noon-1:00 PM, School of Nursing, Room 144

Guest Speaker:

Matthew Wynia, MD, MPH, FACP

Director, The Institute for Ethics at the American Medical Association

Moderator:

Patrick Dunn, MD

Director, Ethics Education - OHSU Center for Ethics

Matthew Wynia, MD, MPH, FACP

Upon graduating from the OHSU School of Medicine, Dr. Wynia became a specialist in infectious diseases, and is now the head of the Institute for Ethics at the American Medical Association. Through his work, Dr. Wynia has been a pioneering advocate for the idea that the ethical climate of health care organizations can be measured and improved. His research and writing has focused on answering pointed questions of health care ethics, including examining physicians' responses to market pressures in medicine. Dr. Wynia's groundbreaking and often controversial work has been published in the New England Journal of Medicine, JAMA, Health Affairs and many other medical and ethics journals and he has been featured on ABC News Nightline, the BBC World Service, Marketplace, and other programs.