NEW EMERITUS FACULTY

The following newly-designated emeritus members of the faculty are honored for the quality of their contributions to the school and to the university.

Some will continue to participate and offer their expertise on a part-time basis. Others have spent a number of years here and are moving on but maintain their interest in OHSU and continue to make invaluable contributions to their professions.

Robert B. Amon, MD, professor emeritus, department of dermatology, is a School of Medicine graduate (class of 1965) who completed his internship and residency here and holds a Master of Public Health degree from Harvard School of Public Health. He served in the Public Health Service detailed to the Peace Corps in Africa between 1966 and 1969 and as a staff physician for the Peace Corps until 1972 and opened his private practice of dermatology in 1976 the same year he joined the faculty. He has been a clinical investigator and examiner for The Procter & Gamble Company since 1976 conducting studies in Canada, Japan, China and multiple sites in the U.S. Dr. Amon is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and has been recognized by the School of Medicine Alumni Association with a Meritorious Achievement Award.

Roland M. Atkinson, MD, professor emeritus, department of psychiatry, came to OHSU in 1976 as associate professor of psychiatry and chief of inpatient and emergency psychiatry at the Portland VA Medical Center. He is a graduate of Stanford Medical School and interned and took his residency at UCLA School of Medicine. He joined the faculty of UCLA as assistant professor of psychiatry in 1967 and moved to the College of Medicine, UC Irvine, in 1970 as assistant professor of psychiatry and human behavior and chief, adult psychiatric inpatient and emergency services. From 1973-1976 Dr. Atkinson was involved in full-time teaching and research there.

Since joining OHSU he served as interim chairman of the psychiatry department in 1994-1996, and was head of the division of geriatric psychiatry between 1994 and 2000. He was named professor of psychiatry in 1984. From 1996 to the present, Dr. Atkinson has maintained a part-time private practice of adult outpatient psychiatry. Throughout his career, Dr. Atkinson has been recognized for his contributions to the field, has served on numerous editorial boards of professional journals, has consulted widely and has contributed to scientific journals and books.

Robert F. Bell, MD, professor emeritus, department of dermatology, is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma School of Medicine who interned and took a dermatology residency at OHSU. He spent three years with the Army Medical Corps in Germany between 1965 and 1968 and then began a dermatology practice in Tulsa, Oklahoma. He began his private practice in Portland in 1980 and served a chief of dermatology at St. Vincent Hospital between 1990 and 1992. Dr. Bell has been active in the Washington County Medical Society, Oregon State Medical Society and American Medical Association as well as the Oregon Dermatology Society. He has contributed to scientific and professional journals. At OHSU he served as chairman of the Clinical Faculty Advisory Committee for the Department of Dermatology. He joined the faculty here in 1980.

John M. Burket, MD, professor emeritus, department of dermatology, made monthly, 600-mile round trips between 1977 and 2004 during the school year from Medford to Portland to teach at OHSU and has been recognized with OHSU teaching awards. He is a graduate of the University of Iowa Medical School where he took his internship and residency. He began his teaching career while he was at March Air Force Base as chief of dermatology in 1964-1966 where he began a rotation of medical students (from Loma Linda Medical School) through the dermatology department. Subsequently other clinical departments adopted the program. Dr. Burket opened his private practice in Medford in 1966 and served on the staffs of Rogue Valley Medical Hospital and Medford Providence Hospital. He has served as president of the Oregon Dermatologic Society, the Jackson County Medical Society, the Pacific Northwest Dermatologic Society and the Pacific Dermatologic Society. He has contributed to professional publications and with other local dermatologists, established a weekly self-teaching program for dermatopathology in Medford hospitals. He is particularly proud of his six children, three of whom have M.D. degrees (one a D.M.D. and M.D.)

Frederick A.J. Kingery, MD, professor emeritus, department of dermatology, joined the faculty of the then University of Oregon Medical School in 1959. He is a graduate of New York College of Medicine and took his internship and residency in dermatology at the University of Michigan Hospital. He has been extremely active in professional organizations, serving as President of the Pacific Dermatological Association, the Northwest Society for Clinical Research, the Board of Trustees of the National Program for Dermatology, President of the American Board of Dermatology, and was named Teacher of the Year in 1996 of the Dermatology Foundation. He served as chairman of the Joint Commission for Recertification in Dermatology, and President of the Medical Research Foundation of Oregon. Dr. Kingery also was a member of the Board of Directors of the Oregon Regional (now National) Primate Research Center and a trustee of the OHSU Foundation. He is an honorary foreign member of the British Association of Dermatologists and the Irish Association of Dermatologists. He was recognized by OHSU with a Meritorious Achievement Award in 1979. Dr. Kingery’s contributions have not been limited to professional organizations: he has been a board or committee member for the Northwest Outward Bound School, Portland Art Museum, Portland Opera Association, Boys and Girls Aid Society and the Oregon Arts Heritage Endowment Fund. In addition, he has been a consultant in syphilology to the City of Portland as well as to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Communicable Disease Center.
