FMIG Program of Excellence Award

Twenty-two OHSU medical students attended the American Academy of Family Physicians’ National Conference held in Kansas City, Missouri on July 30 - August 1. They joined over 700 medical students from 126 medical schools.

The OHSU Family Medicine Interest Group (FMIG) received the Program of Excellence Award at the American Academy of Family Physicians’ National Conference held in Kansas City, Missouri, last week. Accepting the award for the FMIG was Michael Goodwin, MS 3. OHSU's FMIG has won the national award for 10 of the past 11 years it has been awarded, recognizing the group as one of the ten most outstanding student groups in the country.

Rob Stenger was elected resident representative to the AAFP Board of Directors. Also, the chair for next year’s meeting is Shannon (Brooke) Brodersen, an OHSU graduate, now serving her Family Medicine residency in the Air Force.

Ten OHSU students won AAFP scholarships to attend the meeting, based on an essay contest. We are also grateful to the Oregon Academy of Family Physicians for sponsoring two more students to attend.
AAFP National Students and Residents Conference 2009

This year’s National Conference was brought to us through the hard work of Robert Stenger, MD, MPH who co-chaired the conference with Bethany Enoch, a medical student from Kansas. Rob is one of two 4th year residents and chiefs in the Combined Family Medicine / Preventive Medicine and Public Health Residency for 2009-2010.

The theme of this year’s conference was “Health Policy: Building a Better Health Care System.” We were proud to share information about health policy in our department and program, as we talked to more than 150 students at the conference. We featured information about our QI/Continuous Improvement projects with Sherrill Gelmon, the SBIRT program under John Muench and the public health and policy opportunities of the standard and combined program.

Mellisa Pensa, a second year resident in our program, ran for resident position with the AAFP during the conference. Though she had a good presence, and made a strong showing, she was not voted into the position. Mellisa’s name is still in the running for a position that will be selected in the coming months and we’re all cheering for her!

Rob Stenger was selected to be the AAFP student representative for the coming year. This is a terrific opportunity, and we are very proud to have him in the position.

In addition to Rob and Mellisa, Daisuke Yamashita was at the conference as resident representative to the Society of Teachers of Family Medicine. Thayer White, Jessica Cozzens, Sarah Present, Hadjh Ahrens, and Megan Smith attended the conference as residents and manned the booth to help share information about our program to students. Tom Warrington and Roger Garvin attended as faculty representatives.

This exciting event marks the beginning of recruiting season for our program.
The conference opened with an 80’s theme party that featured some spiffy duds and for some reason, the game “Twister.”

Friday night, the Oregon program hosted a reception for the students featuring Oregon beer.

It was a fun evening for all.

Students and Preceptors Busy All Summer

Summer, for most first and second year medical students, is usually the time to fit in a family reunion, a wedding or “the last vacation” they think they will have for many years. But for 22 first and second year OHSU medical students, this summer was the perfect opportunity to practice clinical skills and to learn more about the life of a family physician in Oregon.

For the 23rd year in a row, the Summer Observership Program gave incoming first year students the chance to spend one week living and working with a family physician. The week is full of “firsts” for many of these students: the first time to assist in a clinic, the first time they took a patient history, or the first time they witnessed a birth. This year 7 MSI students took part in the Observership, and shared their experiences over dinner at the home of Dr. Bill and Marlene Toffler. Students told of late night calls to the delivery room, complicated patient cases and evenings exploring the community with the physicians and their families. Every student expressed awe and appreciation for the example of dedication and compassion by their host physicians.

The Rural Family Medicine Experience offers incoming second year students the opportunity to spend one or two weeks in a rural community with a family physician. The students, who have already spent one year of PCM working with a physician, are given some responsibility and autonomy in the clinic – while under the close supervision of their preceptor. A more in-depth experience than the Summer Observership, they often help with procedures, exams and even deliveries. These students are also eligible for a small monetary stipend through the generosity of the Oregon Academy of Family Physicians Foundation. This year 15 rising second year students participated in the RFME, and will be sharing their experiences at an OAFP Foundation luncheon in September. We welcome host physicians to attend the lunch if they would like to be included.

Annual Pennington Lectures Held August 7

The 13th annual Merle Pennington MD Lectures in Family Medicine were held Friday, August 7 at the OHSU Center for Health and Healing. More than 80 community family physicians joined residents, students and faculty to hear what’s new in clinical family medicine.

This year the Merle Pennington Lecture was a panel discussion, moderated by Elizabeth Steiner, on the topic: Illness in the Physician’s Family.

Eric Walsh, MD, Joe Gilhooley, MD, Moderator Elizabeth Steiner, MD, Medical Student Rachel Pillod and Burt Silverman, MD

The lecture series honors Merle Pennington, MD, an early faculty member and leader in the department, who taught hundreds of residents and students in practice today. Faculty member Chip Taylor recalled Merle teaching him physical examination skills in the early 1980s.

As part of the day, OHSU Family Medicine Master Teachers were honored. In 2009 there were 44 physicians awarded the title of “Master Teacher” for their outstanding commitment to teaching. Peggy O’Neill, Community Outreach Coordinator, presented certificates to the following Master Teachers present at the Pennington Lecture: Bill Barth, Suzanne El-Attar, Bob Holland, Tedd Levin, Sam Richard, Burt Silverman and Bill Ventres.

Residency director Roger Garvin was quoted in the August issue of AAFP News Now. Dr. Garvin told AAFP News Now that he's found it is essential to put vaccine-preventable diseases in context for parents -- and that's what residents in our program are trained to do. It's precisely because vaccines have been so successful, he said, that people don't see certain diseases.

The ‘Circle of Life’ Palliative Care Award has been conferred on OHSU this year. OHSU is one of only three hospitals in the nation to earn this prestigious award. The award was formally presented by representatives of the American Hospital Association with Dr. Eric Walsh attending because of the development of the new fellowship, his coordination of hospice care with OHSU discharges, and work with the center for Ethics and city-wide palliative care educational conferences.

James Calvert recently had a publication in the Journal of Rural Health.
OHSU Hospice Palliative Care Fellowship Receives Grant

Through the Portland site, Odyssey VistaCare Hospice Foundation has made a $25,000 grant to a new fellowship training program in Hospice and Palliative Care. The program is in collaboration with the Department of Family Medicine at Oregon Health and Science University (OHSU).

The Hospice Palliative Care Fellowship is directed by Dr. Eric Walsh, Portland's Medical Director, and an Associate Professor of Family Medicine at OHSU. Two physicians – Dr. Alyssa Luddy and Dr. Elizabeth McCormick – have accepted positions as the first fellows, starting in September. They will divide their time between inpatient palliative care and working with Odyssey, in order to become board certified in Hospice and Palliative Medicine.

The grant will help fund the time Dr. Walsh serves as teacher and mentor of these fellows. In addition, the Department of Family Medicine will offer OHSU academic appointments as "Associate Clinical Instructor in Family Medicine" to the nurses, social workers and chaplains at Odyssey.

"With the aging of the baby boomers and the rise in chronic diseases at the end of life, there is an increasing need for more physicians who truly understand hospice and palliative care," notes Sharon Anderson, Executive Director of the Foundation. "The Foundation is proud to support this important training program."

Scott’s Birthday Bash

OHSU Family Medicine celebrated Scott Fields’ 50th birthday at the monthly Department Meeting on August 6, 2009. The surprise was a music video, spoofing Scott in some of his favorite activities, including tennis, swimming and dancing. (Dancing??)

The video featured many Department members, but the star was clearly Ben Cox, who portrayed Scott throughout the many vignettes.

The video included a filmed message from Peter Goodwin, who has been one of Scott’s mentors.

Scott sat in the front row and watched the video, apparently quite amused. See photos.

Happy Birthday, Scott!
