Develop, learn, connect: Join OHSU’s community of practice

Do you want to develop or refine your skills for teaching in the classroom, clinic or lab? Learn how to turn the work that you are doing in education into scholarly publications or presentations? Connect with colleagues who are interested in educational innovation?

If this sounds interesting, the School of Medicine Educators’ Collaborative is the place for you!

Apply to join the School of Medicine Educators’ Collaborative by June 15, 2018.

Please visit ohsu.edu/educollab for a membership application.

About the Educators Collaborative

The School of Medicine Educators’ Collaborative is a member-driven community of practice for people who are interested in education, including direct teaching, innovation, scholarship, curriculum design, mentoring, assessment and education administration. We sponsor monthly Education Grand Rounds, social events (Coffee with the Collab) and small group “pods” for writing and scholarly work. We also direct the Education Innovations mini-grants program and host the annual Symposium on Educational Excellence.

Now welcoming new members

We are welcoming faculty who impact learners in any program in the School of Medicine. For the first time, we’re opening membership to School of Medicine staff who are passionate about education and for whom it is a large component of their work. Membership is an honor and a form of recognition for excellent work in education. Applications for membership will be accepted May 1 through Friday, June 15, 2018.

Learn more

To learn more about the Educators Collaborative and to access the online membership application, visit www.ohsu.edu/educollab. Questions? Email educollab@ohsu.edu.