unexpired, and still-useful materials from the operating rooms, clinics, and research departments throughout OHSU. Rather than being discarded, these supplies are sorted and inventoried for use in our institution, our community, and abroad. Supplies recovered by Remedy will be made available to clinics in the Portland area, distributed to local health professionals traveling and providing care abroad, and donated to medical missions globally. The program is currently operated by OHSU students and researchers in partnership with OCTRI, the OHSU Global Health Center, the OHSU Green Team, and the PSU & OHSU IHI Open School Chapter.

We are brothers and sisters with similar backgrounds embarking on a noble but often difficult career path. Confiding in peers or upper classmates who “have been there” is a helpful and therapeutic tool; 3) as future leaders in our fields and within the community – we aim to volunteer and act as stewards for veterans and community members who are less fortunate than ourselves.</td>

We strive for opportunities to teach our peers about the unique and diverse veteran population while serving our community whenever possible. While the VFVN was founded within the School of Medicine, all veterans and friends of veterans are encouraged to join, participate and lead in volunteer events. Additionally, the VFVN is in communication with the Veterans Employee Resource Group (VERG) and will be sending out information regarding VERG events/resources/speakers as opportunities arise.

Wilderness Medicine Interest Group

The WMIG at OHSU is a group dedicated to educating health care students in the practice of medicine in remote, austere, and resource limited environments. The WMIG strives for a hands-on approach that exposes members to the challenging simulation often, in addition to didactic learning. It is our belief that medical education in the Northwest has an obligation to producing practitioners with capabilities that extend beyond the hospital. And to the end that WMIG looks to conglomerate resources and contacts, which give students the tools they need to expand their skills to care for their patients in extraordinary and unexpected circumstances.
