

Recognizing Outstanding Service Excellence

Dan Rothbard
Pathology

Karyn Harmon from Pathology submitted the following nomination. . .

During the inclement weather, many OHSU workers made great efforts to be on campus. One was Dan Rothbard. Even though Dan Rothbard lives in Washington, he was the first person here every morning. He slept in an office the first night the weather struck so he would be available in the event a cadaver donor showed up. He was in the lab and working hard every day to make sure that lab results were not delayed due to weather. On several mornings Dan spent hours alone in the lab, juggling phones, lab equipment, and incoming specimens. In spite of the heightened workload and stress, Dan kept things running and moving forward. Dan Rothbard demonstrated a commitment to patient care that makes me proud to work at OHSU.
