

Recognizing Outstanding Service Excellence

Steve Osgood

Core Lab and POC Testing

Sherry Padgett from Clinical Neurophysiology submitted the following nomination...

Every year in our department we accept two students into a year-long EEG training program. We look for individuals that make a good fit for our lab and for OHSU and this year we were really lucky to find an excellent internal candidate from the Core Lab at OHSU. When I asked the applicant how she discovered our training opportunity she mentioned that her supervisor- Steve had received the information from director Juanita Petersen and had posted the information in their lab. The applicant was very excited about our opportunity and contacted me to job shadow in our department to see if it would make a good fit. Over 100 applicants applied for these two training spots and she became one of our finalists. Unfortunately, the cost of the school is very expensive and she needed to continue working while attending the school and training. I think Steve's support for her shadowing and encouragement in building her career shows true commitment to the educational mission of OHSU. Supporting current employees in advancement is often difficult to do, especially when it means a hard-working employee is going into another discipline or transferring to another department. His support of her application, job-shadow and continued employment shows his true commitment to core missions of OHSU. I would like to nominate him for a Golden ROSE and thank him for supporting this applicant in her educational goals.
