ANNOUNCING THE 2010 ONPRC SUMMER FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM FOR UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS

The Oregon National Primate Research Center invites college undergraduates who are interested in neuroscience, reproductive sciences, or infectious disease to apply for the ONPRC Summer Fellowship Program. Two tracks are available: Applicants selected for 8-week apprenticeships will receive a $2400 stipend. Those selected for 10-week apprenticeships will receive a $3000 stipend. (Successful applicants who live out of state may be eligible for assistance with travel expenses.)

Principal Investigators in the Divisions of Neuroscience, Reproductive Sciences, and Pathobiology and Immunology oversee research programs related to high-priority medical needs that are expected to increase in importance and funding emphasis over the coming decades. These include research in neurodevelopment, neuroendocrinology, neurodegeneration, cancer, aging, mental illness, brain injury, addiction, obesity, reproductive health, immune response to infectious agents, and stem cells.

The Summer Fellowship Program for Undergraduates seeks qualified applicants who will enter either their junior or senior year of college in the Fall of 2010. Selected applicants will work as part of a research team in an established laboratory alongside a staff member whose research interests complement the student's own. A special summer seminar series, weekly lab meetings, journal clubs, and access to other laboratories at the Center combine to make this program a comprehensive, creative and accelerated learning experience.

We look forward to receiving your application.
