OHSU Emergency Medicine is accepting applications for its Education Research Fellowship. Fellows may select either a scholarship in education or an education research track. This fellowship is ideal for emergency medicine residency graduates with a strong interest in academics. It provides postgraduate training in education methods, research skills, and residency program administration.

Training consists of 3 components:

- Clinical commitment: Fellows are expected to work eight clinical shifts per month at OHSU or affiliate hospitals.

- Didactic component: Fellows typically complete masters-level education coursework. Options include the OHSU Human Investigations Program, a 2-year certificate curriculum in research methods, with the opportunity to earn a Masters in Clinical Research (MCR) with an education focus, or a local or national masters in education program. There is flexibility to accommodate similarly rigorous masters or certificate programs to meet the needs of the fellow.

- Administration: The Education Scholarship Fellow will assume a leadership role that aligns with their career interests. Past examples include functioning as an assistant program director, assistant clerkship director, assistant simulation director, director of web-based education, or director of medical humanities. Fellows are actively involved in resident and student teaching and clinical evaluation, curriculum planning, resident selection, and other aspects of residency program administration.

Qualifications:
- Board certified or board eligible in Emergency Medicine (residency trained)
- Strong interest in academic career as a clinical educator
- Interest in education methods and research
