Taking on Translation

How much of evidence-based innovation makes its way to practice and policy? What is translation of research and why does it matter? Should researchers take on translation? If so, how? Dr. Rameshbabu will delve into the impact of research and how it can reach beyond scientific journals. Using examples from the Oregon Healthy Workforce Center, she will illuminate steps that intervention researchers can take to foster collaboration with their intended audience, harness stakeholder insights during research and development, and share recommendations for furthering intervention impact. Her goal is to bring to the table perspectives of both, researchers and practitioners, who should have an equitable say in ensuring that science reaches its full potential to enhance safety, health, and well-being for people and communities.
