Woodcock Lecture: “Teaching Psychodynamics in the 21st Century”

Although it has its origins at the outset of the last century, the psychodynamic psychotherapy we practice today has changed dramatically, and the way we teach it should, too. This year’s Woodcock Lecture Teaching Psychodynamics in the 21st Century, presented by Dr. Deborah Cabaniss from Columbia University, will explore how staying connected to the worlds of neuroscience, other psychotherapeutic modalities and education can help modern learners to understand and meaningfully engage with psychodynamic psychotherapy.

EDUCATION OBJECTIVES

- Participants will have been introduced to new models for teaching psychodynamic psychotherapy and formulation
- Participants will have experienced ways of using clear learning objectives to enhance learning in psychotherapy supervision
- Participants will be exposed to the Listen/Reflect/ Intervene method of teaching and conducting psychodynamic psychotherapy

TARGET AUDIENCE

Psychiatrists, child psychiatrists, psychologists, psychiatry resident and fellows, medical students, LCSW’s, MA’s, PA’s, NP’s, RN, PMHNP and PharmD’s.
