

OHSU CME Event

5th Annual Multiple Sclerosis Wellness Research Symposium

The Microbiome and Brain Health in MS

October 18, 2019 • Portland, Oregon

Purpose:	This half day symposium brings together experts from Oregon State University, OHSU, Washington University in St Louis, and Mount Sinai Hospital to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"><li>1. Explore the microbiome in the pathophysiology and treatment of MS and</li><li>2. Generate research questions for future cross-disciplinary studies.</li></ol>
-----------------	---

Target Audience:	For basic scientists and clinicians with an interest in microbiome research. The symposium welcomes participants at all stages of expertise.
-------------------------	--

Date &amp; Location:	Friday, October 18th 2019 12:30 – 5:15 PM, reception to follow OHSU Doernbecher Vey Conference Center – Portland, Oregon
-----------------------------	--

Online attendance option available.

Registration:	Free for OHSU/VA and all Academic Institution affiliates, students, and employees. $75 Regular Registration, CME credit memo included www.ohsubrain.com/mswellness
----------------------	---

Speakers:	Thomas Sharpton, PhD – Oregon State University An overview of the microbiome in health and disease Michael Lane, MD - OHSU The role of the microbiome in the gut-brain axis Laura Piccio, MD, PhD - Washington University in St Louis Evidence for the influence of the microbiome in EAE Ilana Katz Sand, MD – Icahn School of Medicine, Mount Sinai Hospital Evidence for the influence of the microbiome in MS and future directions
------------------	--

Contact:	Emma Chase chaseem@ohsu.edu (503) 494-3549
-----------------	--