Letters from a Hospitalist:

What do we Really Think of each other and How do we Build Stronger Partnerships in Palliative Care?

presented by

Rekha Thammana, M.D., M.P.H.
VA Portland Health Care System

Dr. Thammana hails from central New York and majored in biological sciences at Cornell University, graduating magna cum laude. She later attended medical school and public health school at Emory University where she also completed her internal medicine residency at Emory University. She then became a hospitalist with Kaiser Permanente in Atlanta, Georgia for three years. After which, she completed a fellowship in hospice and palliative medicine at OHSU in 2019. Her interests include interprofessional education and health disparities. She is thrilled to be joining the Portland VA and the Portland palliative care community after fellowship.
