Registration Completed July 28, 2020	Growth Factor	Hearts fail, kidneys fail, livers fail; and sometimes, medical students and physicians do, too. Despite advanced technologies and cutting edge research, there is much about human illness that we simply do not know. Poor judgement, errors, and academic or personal setbacks are commonplace; after all, we are only human. Yet, failure in medicine is not talked about. In a field characterized by high stakes, burnout, and perfectionism, openness about our failures is paramount to creating a culture of honesty and growth. Growth Factor was created with the hope that through stories from medical professionals about the lessons they learned from their personal setbacks, we can remove the shame and humiliation that often accompanies failure. The purpose is not to encourage failure, but rather encourage students to be the best physicians through embracing the inevitability of failure as an avenue for improvement and growth. Registration Completed October 22, 2020	Orofacial Pain and Airway Centered Disorders Student Club	Our club is focused on orofacial pain and airway centered disorders, and the role that dentists can play in their recognition and treatment. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to temporomandibular joint disorders (TMD), obstructive sleep apnea, bruxism, mouth breathing, snoring, upper airway resistance syndrome, and headaches/migraines. The treatment of these disorders provides relief of pain, directly improves the quality of life for patients, and can even extend life expectancy. At club meetings we will introduce these disorders, review the literature, have case presentations and guest lecturers, explore treatment modalities, introduce the concept of medical billing for dentists, and also provide resources for students on attending graduate programs, residencies, and CE programs. Since treating these disorders often involves interprofessional efforts across multiple medical disciplines, all OHSU students and faculty are welcome to attend club meetings, provide their own perspective, and learn more. Registration Completed October 29, 2019	Students Against Gun Violence	As OHSU students we stand in solidarity with people and communities impacted by gun violence. As future health professionals, we have a duty to minimize vectors of human illness and injury - including gun violence - and to contextualize these forces within social, economic, and political frameworks. We recognize the ongoing work of activists on this issue and seek to elevate their voices through our advocacy. As twenty-first century health care workers we will address the disproportionate rates of gun violence against communities of color, women-identified people, members of the LGBTQ community, and those with mental illness. We will address state-sanctioned violence against communities of color and the vilification of those with mental illness in the gun control discourse.
