The Food Systems and Society M.S. program addresses societal factors that enable and constrain equitable food system development. Collaborative, cohort-based, online courses with full time and part-time options, enables students to maintain commitments while engaging with peers in diverse sectors and locations.

CURRICULUM

Students learn about contemporary food systems and investigate and analyze social-justice problems and solutions in the food system using critical social science approaches. Courses include (see the full curriculum and degree pathways on the FSS website):

- Food System Concepts
- Food Policy and Politics
- Food in Culture
- Food System Inquiry
- Social Movements
- Economic Justice
- Food Systems Theory
- Scholarship & Social Change
- Capstone Research

TO APPLY

Courses begin in fall term. Applications open in January for the following fall. We welcome applicants who have earned a Bachelor’s degree in any discipline (minimum 3.0 undergraduate GPA) from a regionally-accredited U.S. educational institution. There are no GRE requirements and we are able to accept applications from U.S. citizens who reside in the U.S. Please apply through the FSS website.

FOOD SYSTEMS CAREERS

Food systems intersect with all aspects of life and many professions in this rapidly growing area of interest. Current FSS students and FSS graduates work in government, nonprofit organizations, education, food writing, community development, healthcare, and food enterprises. Learn about FSS students and their Capstone research on the FSS website.

Email: fss@ohsu.edu