APPLYING TO THE FAMILY NURSE PRACTITIONER PROGRAM

In Oregon, family nurse practitioners deliver critically important services especially to rural and medically underserved populations. Family nurse practitioners (FNP) apply advanced knowledge and clinical skills in many facets of healthcare, including providing prenatal care and family-planning services; providing well-child care; obtaining medical histories and performing physical examinations; diagnosing, treating, and monitoring acute health problems and chronic diseases; ordering, performing and interpreting diagnostic studies. FNP’s have prescriptive rights and work in a variety of settings including hospitals, clinics, businesses, physician offices, independent nurse practitioner offices, and schools of nursing.

The family nurse practitioner program has been designed to cover a combination of advanced practice core, FNP specialty courses, and either master or doctor of nursing practice core courses. This combination prepares students for practice in the field and simultaneously provides a framework for clinical leadership and policy that is critical for any nurse practitioner in practice today.

Degree options: Students in this program can either take two years of full-time study and complete the Master of Nursing (MN) degree or attend for three years of full-time study and achieve the MN on the way to receiving the Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP). A post master’s certificate option (PMCO) is also available in this area for nurse practitioners of another specialty.

Course delivery: This program is offered on the Portland campus and statewide and starts once a year in the fall. The FNP program accepts distance/hybrid students residing in Oregon and bordering counties. The SON is engaged in standardizing our approach to distance education based on best practices, including distance course design and technology. Coursework will require travel to Portland up to 2-4 times each quarter.
