Seminar Description:

This widely acclaimed day-long grant writing seminar addresses practical and conceptual aspects that are important to writing competitive grant proposals, emphasizing idea development, identification of the appropriate granting agency, how to write for reviewers, and tips and strategies of proven value in presenting an applicant's case to reviewers. Regardless of agency, participants are taught to write with a linear progression of logic, leading reviewers through their application. Strategies designed to merit a fundable priority score are emphasized.

Who should attend and why?

- Faculty, postdoctoral researchers, and students planning to write a research grant in the next two years.
- This is an appropriate seminar for individuals with lesser grant writing experience, and is a good refresher for those with more extensive experience.
- Participants receive a grant writing manual that is distributed in the session.
- While targeted towards NIH grants, the principles are appropriate for applicants to other agencies.

OCTRI anticipates offering this program every other year.
