

models confirm Mpdz's role in ethanol withdrawal and support its role in voluntary ethanol consumption." Addict Biol 20(1): 143-147.

2011

2010

2009

2008

2007

2006

2005

Hayward, M.D. and Low, M.J. (2005). Naloxone's suppression of spontaneous and food-conditioned locomotor activity is diminished in mice lacking either the dopamine D(2) receptor or enkephalin. Brain Res. Mol. Brain Res. 140, 91-98.

2004

